

A few notes on the pedagogical activities of PhD students

Pedagogical activities of PhD students are also in accordance with Act no. 131/2002 Coll. on Higher Education Institutions, as well as in changes supplements in later amendments regarding fully accepted activities within their individual study plan. However, it must be emphasized that even the law dictation itself stresses regular participation in conducting exercises:

Article. 21

Part of a full-time PhD study is to perform pedagogical activities or other professional activities related to pedagogy, in accordance with an individual PhD study plan, up to a maximum of four hours a week on average for the academic year, in which teaching is performed.

In this sense, the Academic Council of the Faculty of Natural Sciences has approved the numerical value of credits for individual activities within the PhD study so that the student will earn 2 credits per lesson, 1 hour per week throughout the semester, with a limit of 16 credits in one academic year. Participation in a lesser extent may be evaluated within "other activities".
